Alvino was very approachable and willing to discuss his personal life. I enjoyed his description of the Utah country side and how he loved the afternoon rains which made the lush vegetation prosper. Our subject enjoyed 20 Meters and hung out with a talented morning group around 14.220 Mhz. I called Mr. Rey - “Maestro” and advised how much we respected his work and enjoyed his webpage on the Internet. He operated a very competitive station in Utah.

Maestro learned the banjo and formed his first band when he was 16 years old. By the time he was 20, he was playing for the Phil Spitalny Orchestra in NYC.

In 1929 Alvino cashed in on the Latin music craze by changing his name to Alvino Rey. Alvino in Spanish for Alvin and Rey means “King.”

An early developer, builder and player of the electric guitar, Alvino was the father of the Pedal Steel Guitar and first inductee into the Steel Guitar Hall of Fame in 1978. Rey’s career truly spanned every aspect of the modern broadcast media. He was a lifelong Pioneer ham radio operator, he built and improved some of the earliest electric guitars and served in the Navy during World War II. He had number one hits including many top ten chart songs!

He did pioneering work in Stereo, Television, then mastered the computer and digital recording technology. Rey lost his beloved Luise in 1997, but never stopped working or performing. His musical library was donated to BYU. I’ve got “Blues In The Night” playing in the background, what a fine instrumental! Here is a salute to * Eight Bottles of Pop*! Thanks for the memories Maestro! W8SU 2006
